IMPERIAL QUARTO. ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in culeuse. Each and every word is Messra, Bates, Hanny & Co., Old Jewry, fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Mr. L. P. Fishen, Merchanta Exchange Both the Court and Ponti pronunciations are given, the accenta being carefully marked of the best principle hitherto attained. The typo-graphy displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond n the size of body, thereby effecting a vast previously attained, and dispensing with those vest margins and vacent spaces which have RENCH and English PERFUMERIE vast marking and vacunt spaces which have could LARS and NECK TIES, Race heretofore characterized Chinese publications. In the centre, under a green canopy, was erected the dais for the queen of the fets. Thousands of invited guests were on the tribune, but beyoud the lists, crowds of Berlinors were assembled, although rain threatened all day. At towards six o'clock, the sky cleared up, and, led by her father, and accompanied by the other princesses, the Empress appeared. Having received her sanction, the company of knights advanced towards the colonnade of the palace to the inner court-yard, preceded by a corps of trumpeters in orange and red. The procession consisted of ten quadrilles, including a standard-bearer, two pages," who bore shield and lance, four knights and three squires, each preceding his princely leader. The royal princes were Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, Duke Charles of Mecklenburg, Dake William of Brunswick-Oels, and the Hereditary Grand Duke of Mecklenburg. The spectacle of the different banners and colours, the arms, the brilliant richness of the costumes of a long-vanished time. gave the procession the aspect of having been conjured up from a dead century into the present. The procession first moved round the lists twice, and then, pausing before the tribune, Duke Charles of Mecklenburg recited some verses of bomage addressed to the Empress, and asked her consent to their jousting in chivalrous strife, in honour of the white rose. To this request she acceded, and appointed two simpires.
